Glastonbury Festival 2022: Headliners and Lineup Revealed

This year, the highly anticipated Glastonbury Festival will feature an impressive lineup of musical acts, with headliners including Dua Lipa, Coldplay, and SZA. Organizers of the festival have announced that, for the first time, female acts will take two of the three headline slots, marking a significant milestone in the event's history.

Headlining the festival on Sunday afternoon will be iconic country-pop star Shania Twain, playing the "legend slot". Thirteen-piece K-Pop boyband Seventeen, The National, LCD Soundsystem, and Sugababes are among the other acts set to perform. Additionally, Avril Lavigne, Cyndi Lauper, and Camila Cabello will be making their Glastonbury debuts, adding even more excitement to the lineup.

According to the BBC, tickets for the festival sold out within an hour of going on sale in November, highlighting the immense popularity of the event. Fans had been eagerly anticipating the announcement of this year's headliners, with rumors circulating about potential acts such as Madonna, Bruce Springsteen, and Stevie Wonder.

Dua Lipa, who last played at Glastonbury seven years ago, will make a triumphant return to the festival stage. Coldplay will also make history by becoming the first act to headline the UK music mecca five times, despite not having performed there since 2016. Rising star SZA, who recently won a Brit Award for best international artist, will also be taking the stage, beating out other top artists for the prestigious honor.

In addition to the headliners, the festival will feature a diverse lineup of acts, including PJ Harvey, Janelle Monae, The Streets, Michael Kiwanuka, Bloc Party, Jessie Ware, Justice, Jamie xx, and many more. With such an impressive array of talent, this year's Glastonbury Festival is sure to be a must-see event for music fans around the world.
